The Southern HSC Trust provides integrated hospital, community and primary care services to people in the areas of Armagh, Banbridge, Craigavon, Dungannon, South Tyrone, Newry and Mourne:

Craigavon Area Hospital - providing a wide range of acute inpatient and outpatient services serving around 241,000 people including a 24 hour emergency department and dedicated mental health facility

Daisy Hill Hospital - a local teaching hospital hosting a 24 hour emergency department and an area wide Haemodialysis Unit which has 28 renal stations. The hospital also has an out of hours GP service and a range of mental health services

Lurgan Hospital - a Consultant led assessment clinic for rapid access from GP referrals as well a community stroke rehabilitation service

St Luke's Hospital - providing in-patient care for people with dementia and a one-stop elderly assessment clinic

South Tyrone Hospital - offering a wide range of services including having a 45 bed Rehabilitation Unit and a Rapid Access Clinic for older patients who have been referred by their GP. The site also has paediatric clinics and provides a full range of mental health and outpatient services

Living in the area:

Living in this area offers striking landscapes on your doorstep with affordable prices. You can buy a 3 bedroom house in the area for £80,000 - £120,000, if you are looking to rent you can stay in a 2 bed house for £450 or a 4 bed house starting at £600 a month. There is transport available to cities such as Belfast with good road links as well as regular bus services to Belfast and other major cities. There are a number of attractions such as St.Patrick's Cathedral or try immersing yourself in the local sport of Gaelic football with Armagh Gaelic Football team being one of the more successful teams in recent times

Recognition and innovation:

Southern HSC Trust has been repeatedly recognised for its innovation and quality of care, improvement and overall performance. In 2015 the acute hospital network - Craigavon Area and Daisy Hill - was named one of the UK's top facilities in the CHKS Top 40 Hospitals programme, for the fourth year running. The Trust is keen to ensure skills development and progress is a top priority as such they have a number of trained Specialty Doctor Medical Appraisers and Mentors which has made it an employer of choice for Specialty Doctors.
